  - b. Former private justinessmen (shop-keepers, etc.) who have already been put out of business.
  - e. Retired givil servants, etc.
  - d. Repatriates from the West.
- 2. The expulsion orders took one of the following forms:
  - a. To vacate the place of residence.
  - b. To leave town altogother this includes an area covering a radius of 30 km from the town.
  - c. To leave town, but without permission to settle in any municipality.

This last alternative means that the expelled persons may only settle temperarily in any place. It follows, therefore, that they are under constant police supervision.

3. These measures, which are officially described as "resettlement of the population", are elicated to be due to the expected arrival of members of families of Soviet industrial specialists. They are said to number about 10,000 persons. It has also been removed that these families belong to Communist Party members from the industrial centers of the USSR.
